

Live Free and Write

Dexter's Inn, Sunapee, NH

June 23-27, 2013

Join us in New Hampshire for a supportive writing workshop in "Beginning Your Novel" or "Creative Nonfiction." Enjoy the refreshing New England summer with plentiful writing time, workshops, catered meals, and relaxing by the pool. Workshops will be led by Mimi Schwartz and Michelle Cameron, and the retreat will be hosted by Peter Murphy.

Beginning Your Novel

This workshop will help you begin the novel you've always wanted to write. Come with ideas and notes, and develop a plan for writing a must-read book. Learn how to structure your plot, develop your characters, explore different points of view, and improve your dialogue-writing skills. Discussions, writing prompts, and supportive feedback will get your big project off to an energized start.

Limited to just 10 participants - Led by Michelle Cameron

The Art and Craft of Creative Nonfiction

We all have true stories to tell: about worlds we know well and new worlds we discover daily. This workshop shows how to capture both, using the power of voice, storytelling, memory, and grace of language to make nonfiction writing come alive. Using in-class exercises as springboards, participants explore strategies for turning fragments of memory and observation into memoir, personal essay, profiles, and narrative journalism.

"I've never done an over-night writing seminar before, and I was amazed at how much writing happened just being away from home. The pacing was just right—enough personal time and a balance of sharing and feedback. The atmosphere was perfect: it was open, honest, sincere, and so encouraging, making everyone in our group feel comfortable exploring and sharing. Definitely worth the money, the drive, and the time!"
